POLITICS

"The friend of humanity cannot recognize a distinction between what is political and what is not. There is nothing that is not political." Thomas Mann, The Magic Mountain (1924).

Like it or not, everything you do as an individual is political. You cannot escape the fact that what you do in your day-to-day life directly, or indirectly, has some effect on someone else. You cannot escape this fact because we are all occupants of this land, and we are therefore responsible for one another and must ultimately answer to one another for our individual actions. That is a political fact. We share the burden because we share the soil.

Every political act, be it in the traditional sense (as with a form of government) or in a more personal sense (as in the boycott of a corporation), has its ramifications elsewhere, sometimes even on a global scale. By the same token, every individual has at their disposal, but often unrealized, the potential to instigate or create political change, be it locally or globally. The recognition of this potential is the first step to real alternatives and real change.

Everyone thinks of politics in terms of affecting the people on Capitol Hill, but that's only because we are sold the idea that change can only come about through Congress or the President etc. We are systematically taught our political insignificance - unless it conforms to the traditional aspects of government and the electoral system, which is bullshit. The advantage (for those in government) in teaching us this notion is that we will ultimately relinquish our potential for individual political power through our acceptance of governmental control, which will leave us with no other avenue of choice but through their system. We have this power in our hands, but our fingers seem numb to the feel of it.

If we realize our individual strength and combine it on a local, national, and international level, we have the potential to do whatever we want to do. The potential will be there to cut through the bullshit that bogs down any real progress. The endless list of critical issues that are facing us could be addressed on a real level of understanding and consciousness, not with token gestures and truths so transparent as to be insulting. Traditional politics can only offer traditional solutions. It becomes time to destroy tradition when tradition is destroying us.

The nineties will either be our salvation, or they will be the straw that breaks the camel's back. And as governments topple in the east and certain western ones rock on their foundations, we realize that it is the people who are bringing these events to pass - the individual, recognizing his or her own power, working within the collective movement. If we consider ourselves friends to humanity, then we cannot afford to distinguish between what is and what is not political. We must recognize the political consequences of everything we do or do not do. And we must realize that we are all, in a sense, politicians. The only difference is that we're not in it for the money or the power, we're in it for our future.

Politics don't exist. Politics are a polemic smokescreen. Politics are ambiguous, superfluous, and ultimately, meaningless. Politics are the impossibility of "power to the people". Politics are a tool of those with power to control those who don't realize their own power (and vice versa). Politics are a weapon in the war against daily life. Politics are the bastardization of freedom. Politics are the war of semantics (and very little else). Politics are the alienation of the masses. Politics are the control of society. Politics are the false representation of those who cannot be represented. Politics are the confirmation of psychic fascism and the lack of personal freedom. Politics are the self-perpetuated self-mockery of left wing politicians. Politics are as significant as Sony Walkmans, Secret Decoder, and the Special Olympics. Politics aren't even propaganda. Politics are the agit-prop of the spectacle (and very little else). "We have a world of pleasures to win, and nothing to lose but boredom."

Politics are the opium of the masses. They act as an intellectual drug to keep us all ideologically sedate. We have no real control over the government. Democracy is a myth. It's the dying dream that we are free... That we all have a voice... That we count.

But the reality is that no political agenda, leader, or movement can offer true freedom. How can any one idea represent every human being? Or even a majority?

How many human beings really want to be represented in the first place? The fact is, people are non-political.

Politics began as a form of standardization and control of society (and the power it represents). Politics now exist to maintain the status quo. No politico is exempt from this bankrupt concept. Even with their best intentions, the machine of the system manipulates power against the idea of the individual.

Politics are an anthropological Pandora's box and whose demons stupefy our creativity and numb our desires. One analogy I've read is that the benevolent politico is a finger pointing at the moon. But the sad truth is that the masses are all so caught up in looking at the finger, they never see the moon! When slaves are given the illusion of freedom, they work harder. When they're tempted with the possibility of a better life, they fall into the traps of self-indentured subservency.

Politics are religion in an economic context. Politics are designed by jargon to alienate possibility of self-confidence.

As long as we play political games, no matter what the reasoning, we're part of the problem and not the solution.

Politics don't exist.

"It has been argued that when killing is viewed as not only permissible but heroic behavior sanctioned by one's government or cause, the distinction between taking a human life and other forms of impermissible violence gets lost, and rape becomes an unfortunate but inevitable by-product of the necessary game called war. Women, by this reasoning, are simply regrettable victims - incidental, unavoidable casualties - like civilians victims of bombing, lumped together with children, homes, personal belongings, a church, a dike, a water buffalo or next year's crop. But rape in war is qualitatively different from a bomb that misses its military target, different from impersonal looting and burning, different from deliberate ambush, mass murder or torture during interrogation, although it contains elements of all of the above. Rape is more than a symptom of war or evidence of its violent excess. Rape in war is a familiar act with a familiar excuse. War provides men with the perfect psychologic backdrop to give vent to their contempt for women. The very maleness of the military - the brute power of weaponry exclusive to their hands, the spiritual bonding of men at arms, the manly discipline of orders given and orders obeyed, the simple logic of the hierarchical command - confirms for men what they long suspect, that women are peripheral, irrelevant to the world that counts, passive spectators to the action in the center ring. Men who rape in war are ordinary Joes, made extraordinary by entry into the most exclusive male-only club in the world. Victory in arms brings group power undreamed of in civilian life. Power for men alone. The unreal situation of a world without women becomes the prime reality. To take a life looms more significant than to make life, and the gun in the hand is power. The sickness of warfare feeds on itself. A certain number of soldiers must prove their newly won superiority - prove it to a woman, to themselves, to other men. In the name of the victory and the power of the gun, war provides men with a tacit license to rape. In the act and in the excuse, rape in war reveals the male psyche in its boldest form, without the veneer of 'chivalry' or civilization."

What's causing those terrible headaches?

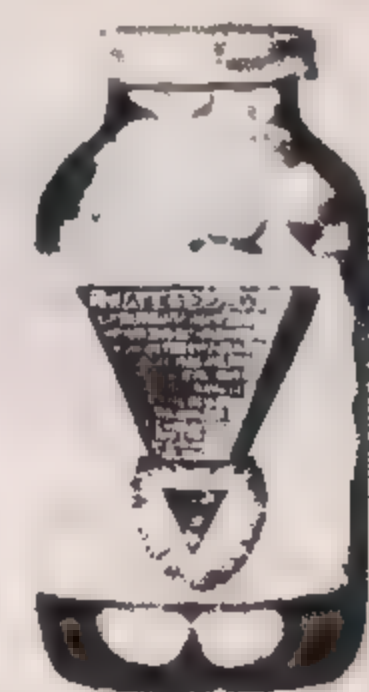

It's one of the most frequent complaints we have. Headache. In fact, about half the patients of a doctor in general practice suffer from headaches.

Sure, you've had them too; and if they become chronic, you wonder what's behind them. It could be your eyes, ears, sinuses, nose, or teeth. Or is it constipation, vitamin deficiency, or an allergy?

Actually, the most frequent cause of headache is tension. The kind of tension produced by a society that places the value of commodities above the fulfillment of natural desires and insists on rampant authority to keep us in line. What to do about it? For years, people depended mostly on promises from outside sources--religions, leaders, new ideologies, and reform of institutions. But today it's evident that these attempts have gotten us nowhere, and indeed, have set us back!

So there isn't any more time to lose. Instead of putting our faith elsewhere, in vague statements from authority, in the promise of a paradise tomorrow, let's work with what we know best--ourselves, here and now.

If you've been bothered by chronic headaches, don't hesitate to take immediate steps to remedy it. Plenty of people share the same problem. It's time we take it upon ourselves to stop being bricks in their pyramid scam. Inverting the pyramid brings headache relief quicker than any bill or leader ever could. After a police officer nearly beat to death 53 year old United Farm Workers organizer Dolores Huerta for the grave crime of not getting out of his way fast enough, San Francisco's mayor and police chief declined to authorize any discipline, claiming the officer had acted properly.

In their first year of providing free hot nutritious meals to San Francisco's homeless, Food Not Bombs volunteers were arrested nearly 130 times, and had large quantities of food confiscated.

POLL TAX

Historians, however, have been rolling their eyes and muttering 'I told you so' because Poll Tax has been tried before in 1381. It led to the peasant's revolt, during which 60,000 people expressed their displeasure by marching on London. They chopped the Archbishop of Canterbury's head off and paraded it round the city on a pole.

On March 31, 1990, 200,000 people took to the streets of London to demonstrate against the Poll Tax. In Scotland, where half a million people are officially recognised as non payers, and another 500,000 are seriously in arrears.

All over the country, demonstrators have been provoked and brutally attacked by the police. Completely unnecessary force has been used, as demonstrators were refused their basic civil right to demonstrate peacefully once again in Thatcher's Britain. Others were beaten, some unconscious, people were thrown into a panic, scream

The truth is that in this country, peaceful protest would never even be allowed to get to the stage it got to in Tiananmen Square.

The fact is that people in their thousands are protesting against the Thatcher regime. They are protesting about the gap between rich and poor in this country. They are young and old, without adequate housing, heat in the winter, access to health care, educational opportunities and employment.

CAN'T PAY

the lack of equality on the principle of ability to pay.

The poll tax revolt may therefore mark a welcome return to the belief that we have the right to be the participants in shaping our own future and regain the power that ought to be ours, as of right, and it is not about what someone else will do for us later when they are in power.

There could be ten million people refusing to pay the Poll Tax by the autumn. If we stick together we can defeat the Poll Tax, and at the same time get rid of the government. Join your local Anti-Poll Tax Union. And don't pay the Poll Tax!

The People Revolt

WON'T PAY

But perhaps the most important aspect of the poll tax revolt is that it may mark the beginning of the end of "spectator democracy" where the people are expected to sit at home and have their politics drip-fed to them in the form of very brief quotations from speeches made accompanied by "safe" explanations, all made exciting by endless speculation about the leading personalities and the latest opinion polls.

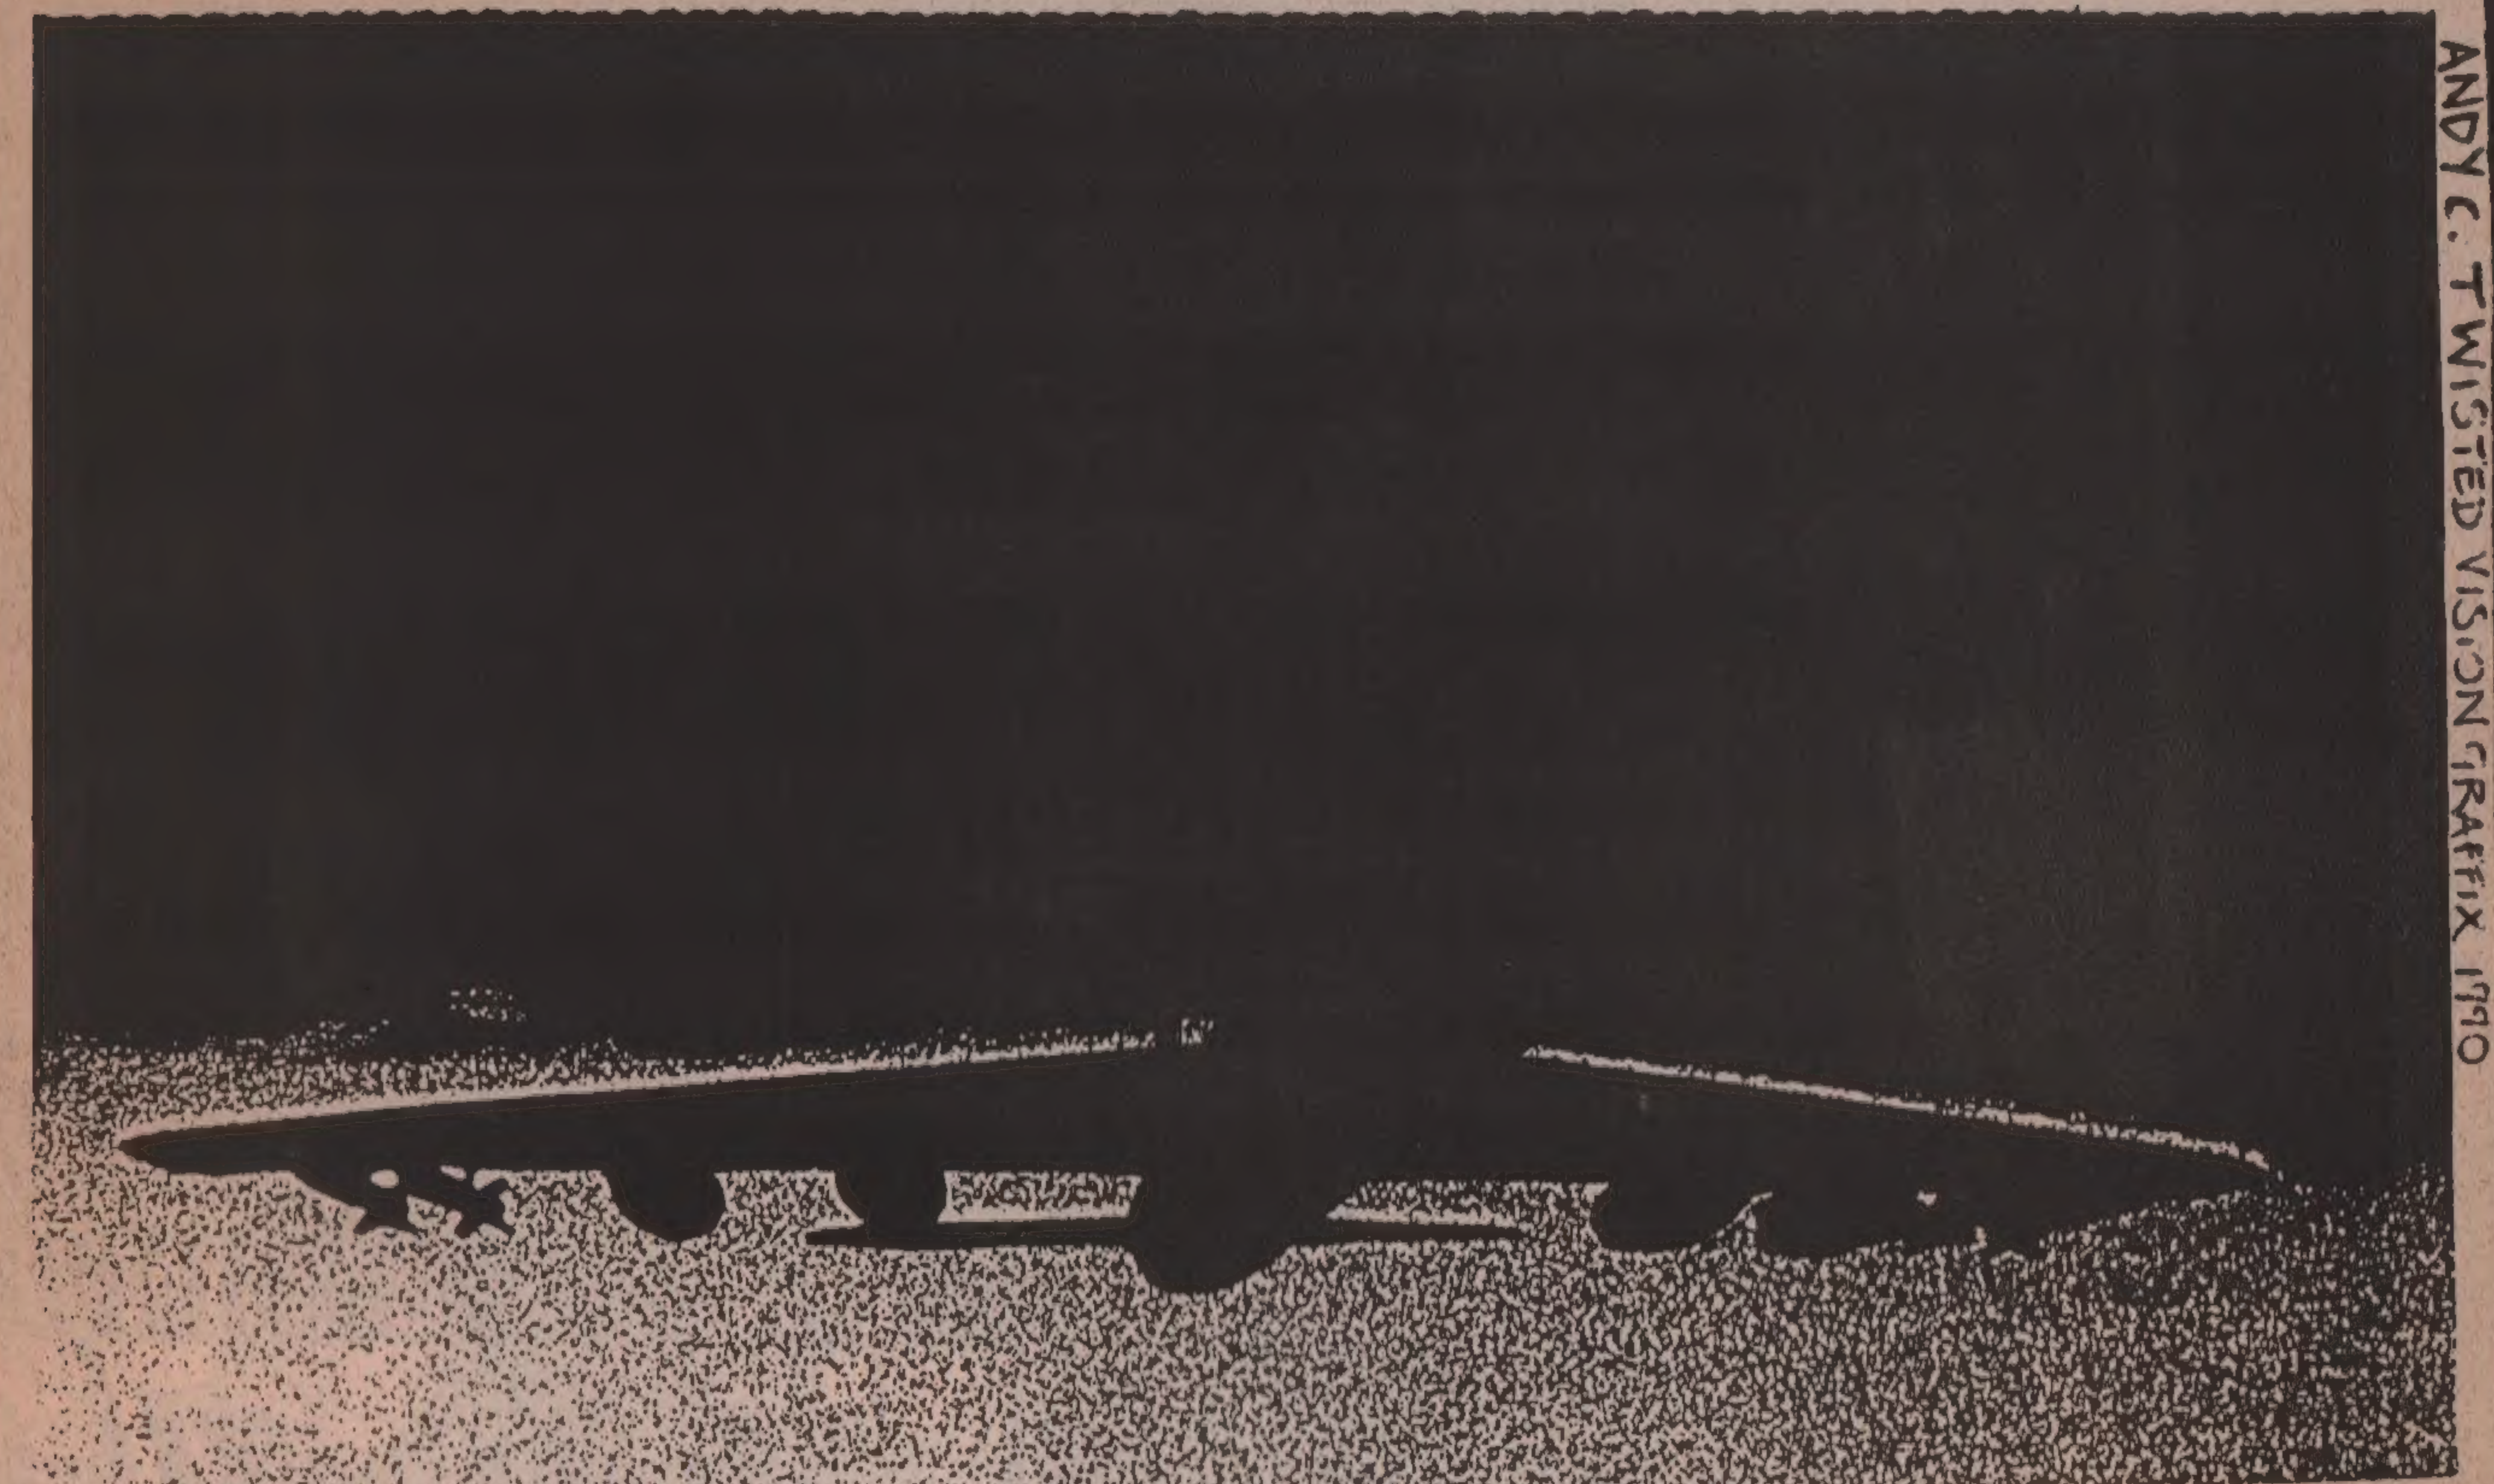

• The Duke of Westminster, the richest man in Britain, who has a personal fortune of $3 billion, used to pay rates of $11,745. His Poll Tax bill on his homes at Abbeystead, near Lancaster, and Eaton Hall, near Chester, now come to a total of just $1,187. The amount that he will pay on one of his homes is $417. His housekeeper and resident chauffeur will have to pay the same amount.

• Under the Poll Tax, Margaret Thatcher will save over $2,000 per year.

Within these pages are images and ideas that are intended to provoke thought, reaction and action. The creators have come together because they felt they had something to offer that might spark a little change, in hopes that we can all become a little more responsible for our own actions, or inaction. Unfortunately, words and images cannot foster change alone; good intentions are meaningless unless backed up by actions. It is up to all of us to do our part - be it on a day-to-day level, or extraordinary acts of agitation (the prelude to change), we must realize our responsibility and act upon it.

These two pages are intended to give practical help towards achieving change. Please do not simply shrug this information off, it was assembled to help you get further information and ideas.

LIBERATE! LIBERATE!

An animal is a life. It has a body, a mind and is forever and ever abused by "man" kind.

The exploitation and suffering of animals at the hands of mankind has become the norm in modern society. After being ingrained into our heads for generations that we have every right to use what-ever 'necessary' for survival of the human race. We still have not come to grips with the fact that in our modern society that they exploitation of animals for food, medical research, clothing, etc. is unnecessary and still only continues for the sake of profit, vanity and greed. When faced with the prospects of changing society's values as a whole, the most important change must come from within. The first steps would be to eliminate the use of animal products from your diet; stop eating meat - go vegetarian, or better yet, go vegan - which means excluding all animal-derived foods and products from your life. Once this step is accomplished, then you can try to persuade others and take further steps towards bring about change. Compiled here are a list of organizations involved with helping to end exploitation of animals.

PETA (People for the Ethical Treatment of Animals) is a broad-based, and probably the largest, animal welfare group in the United States. They organize on many levels and are supportive of all efforts to end exploitation. They have all kinds of informative pamphlets as well as regular newsletter available and offer help to animal rights campaigners. For more information write to:

SOLIDARITY

AN INJUSTICE TO ONE IS AN INJUSTICE TO ALL

How can we struggle to create change while forgetting those who can no longer continue the struggle? We must show support and solidarity for those who have risked their lives and are imprisoned for a better world. Prisons are perhaps one of the most inhuman forms of punishment inflicted on fellow human beings. They're not the holiday camp that we've all been taught to believe - trust us.

Prison News Service

LOOSE LIPS

SINK SHIPS

The sole agreement that emerged from the Paris peace talks in 1969 was on the physical shape of the bargaining table. Even this minuscule accommodation, which turned out to be a round table seating all four parties - Hanoi, the U.S., the NLF and Saigon - involved weeks of haggling between two hardboiled positions. The U.S. barred the NLF from recognition as a full-fledged bargaining partner of Hanoi; the North Vietnamese rejected Saigon as an equal bargaining partner of the U.S. As the U.S. and Hanoi each jockeyed to include its ally as an equal, a total of four table shapes emerged in 1968. The final compromise dispensed with the question of equality by lumping the sides together at the round table. The result made it possible for the U.S. and South Vietnam to maintain that the talks were essentially a two-sided affair - and allowed them to deal with the NLF without according it official recognition. But from the North Vietnamese viewpoint, the NLF was seated on an equal basis. Meanwhile, some 40,000 U.S., some 85,000 South Vietnamese, and some 483,000 North Vietnamese and NLF combined dead had resulted. It's all about...
